The National Security & Resilience Act

Universal $0-Deductible Healthcare

The National Sovereignty and Resilience Act (NSRA) establishes the Basic Minimum Plan (BMP), $0-deductible coverage for every American without job-based insurance, with no premium for families up to about $80,000, delivered through competitive private carriers and funded by the Health Security Fund.

What the Basic Minimum Plan does

The BMP guarantees a $0-deductible health plan to every American under 65 without job-based coverage, and replaces ACA marketplace subsidies with one simpler plan run through the same marketplaces. There is no premium for families up to about $80,000, and premiums above that are capped at 8.5% of income. Medicare stays as it is for seniors, and the ACA's protections for pre-existing conditions stay in force. Rather than replacing private insurance, it sits beneath the existing system: private carriers compete to deliver the BMP, and anyone who wants additional coverage can still buy it. No one is forced off a plan they like.

Medicare at 50, and fair hospital prices

Private insurance stays. Anyone from age 50 to 64 can also choose to buy into Medicare, with the same premium help available on the marketplaces, starting in 2029 (Sec. 2113). The buy-in pays its own way through premiums and has its own account, so it never draws on the Medicare trust funds. About 2.1 million people would be expected to enroll (Urban Institute).

Employers and private insurers paid hospitals an average of 254% of what Medicare pays for the same services in 2022 (RAND). The NSRA limits what private plans pay hospitals to 200% of Medicare, or 300% for rural and critical-access hospitals, and bars billing patients for the difference (Sec. 3410(b)). The Committee for a Responsible Federal Budget estimated a limit like this would save families and employers nearly $1 trillion in premiums and cost sharing over ten years and cut federal deficits by $216 billion.

How it is paid for

The BMP is funded by the Health Security Fund, which draws on the NSRA's enforcement-driven revenue streams, including pharmaceutical parity savings and offshore tax recovery, not income-tax increases on households under $400,000. The Congressional Budget Office scoring pathway is built into the statute.

Why it survives legal challenge

The healthcare titles are engineered for constitutional durability, with an 85% medical-loss-ratio floor and pre-deprivation due-process schedules calibrated to Mathews v. Eldridge. The mechanism is enforceable and administratively concrete.
