At a Glance

The American Deal is the public campaign for the National Sovereignty and Resilience Act (NSRA), a citizen-authored federal proposal of 40 titles and 270 sections, published in full. It is designed to restore fiscal balance and would deliver material household benefits without adding to the deficit, funded by recapturing value that currently leaves the domestic economy without raising income taxes on households under $400,000. The agenda is complete, internally modeled on published government baselines with official CBO/JCT scoring pending, and owned by no party: published in full and open to whoever runs on it first.

The formal legislative vehicle is the NSRA. “The American Deal” is the public movement and governing promise.

Key Figures, With Sourcing

Claim	Figure	Basis
Annual revenue at full ramp (Years 3-5)	$627B	NSRA model on CBO/JCT/OMB/Treasury baselines; Year 1 ~$540B modeled
Annual deficit reduction	$181B	NSRA model; internally sensitivity-tested
Deficit limits (in law)	4.5% to 3% of GDP	Sec. 3406(f); Year 4 and Year 10
Uninsured Americans covered	~30M	Census ACS + CBO 2026 coverage-loss estimate
Federal drug-pricing savings	~$55B/yr	PNAS 2024 G7 price-differential analysis
Insulin price cap	$35/month	Proposed: Title XIII, Sec. 1303
Corporate single-family housing cap	50 units / metro	Proposed: Title XIV, Sec. 1401
Small-business exemption	< $10M revenue	Proposed: Sec. 003(3)

Fiscal figures are NSRA model estimates built on published government baselines: internally modeled and sensitivity-tested, not yet officially scored. Independent and congressional scoring are pending. Full assumptions and citations appear in the bill's Schedule G at TheAmericanDeal.org.

Founder Background

Santonio D. Sanders is the principal architect of the National Sovereignty and Resilience Act. His background is operational rather than political:

- U.S. Navy submarine veteran: nine years as a communications electronics technician; Navy and Marine Corps Commendation Medal.
- U.S. Department of State senior IT auditor and cryptographic program manager (through SAIC, CSRA and GDIT): led a team auditing secure communications at U.S. embassies and consulates worldwide.
- Contractor supporting FBI counterintelligence work on foreign-adversary threats.
- Ambulatory Care Operations Director at the Jesse Brown VA Medical Center in Chicago, leading about 160 staff across the referral continuum, including community care.
- M.S., Health Informatics Administration, University of Maryland.

He wrote the NSRA independently, from publicly available federal data, rather than through a party, PAC, or think tank.

The Nine Promises

The NSRA's 40 titles are organized around nine promises: Anti-Extraction; Anti-Corruption; Pro-Worker & Pro-Farmer; Affordable Health & Medicine; Housing & Shelter; Clean Water & Clean Energy; Future-Building; American Security; and Fiscal Integrity & Self-Funding. Every title maps to at least one promise.

Core Messages

- Deliverability, not ideology. A promise the country can actually keep: real benefits in Year 1, and larger benefits only as verified revenue arrives.
- Genuine revenue, not borrowing. The bill would fund itself by recapturing value leaving the domestic economy, without raising income taxes on households under $400,000.
- The integration is the mechanism. The 40 titles are load-bearing: revenue funds benefits, safeguards protect the revenue, and fiscal controls prevent new deficits. For passage, the agenda is also packaged as five coordinated bills.
- Visible evidence standard. Every major claim is classified by source and review status; official scoring is stated as pending rather than implied.

For Business Audiences

The bill raises the corporate rate from 21% to 25% (Sec. 2409) and taxes income above $400,000 more, and it cuts costs business cares about: drug prices in private plans (Secs. 1301, 1303), federal review on a fixed clock for large infrastructure projects (Sec. 1707), supply-chain investment (Secs. 1204, 1302) and safeguards against another 2008 (Secs. 1605-1611). Businesses under $10 million in revenue are exempt from Covered Entity obligations, and the corporate changes do not touch pass-throughs. Both columns, with sources, are at TheAmericanDeal.org/employers and in the two-page Employers and Investors Brief.
